Adobe Photoshop: A Brief History In 1989, On-Line Business Systems, Inc., a computer graphics software developer, released Photofac, the first image editing software designed for use on color laser printers. Photofac was a hybrid program consisting of both image processing technology and a word processor-like interface. Photofac was the first software for color laser printers, but it was relatively crude in comparison with the computers that came after it. The program itself was the main limiting factor for the user. The following year, Adobe Systems acquired On-Line Systems and renamed it Adobe Photoshop. It had a slightly improved user interface, a more powerful graphic engine, color management tools, and a more intuitive layout, but was still quite primitive compared to today's Photoshop. On-Line Systems was co-founded by Steve Jobs, who was then Apple's marketing VP. He was assigned the role of acquiring the company after he pitched a plan to Steve Jobs's company partner, Scott McNealy, to create a decent image editing program for the Macintosh. After the Apple Macintosh II was introduced in 1983, Jobs succeeded in convincing photographer Brian Solis to add the digital part into a non-linear editing program he was creating for Apple. Steve Jobs and Dennis Ryan, founder of On-Line Systems, agreed to work together to create Adobe Photoshop to debut on the Apple Macintosh. While the program was in development, Jobs convinced Adobe Systems CEO John Warnock to financially back it. On the Macintosh, Adobe Photoshop boasted thousands of hours of testing by Macintosh enthusiasts, who were tasked to test the software in a sort of user test market. While the software was still in development, Apple Computer offered users of the Macintosh an incentive to adopt the program. Steve Jobs called it an "in-place upgrade," which meant that the program could be loaded onto a Macintosh and would transform the computer. The initial release of Photoshop was in November 1989, and the first Macintosh shipped with an early version of Photoshop. The program was so popular that the software was immediately purchased by over 50,000 Apple users. The program was officially released to the public on December 2, 1990, and the company announced that a "half million" people had signed up for an early registration offer. A New Era Photoshop went through three versions before finding a strong balance between the user interface design and the power of the program. The program took three years to become stable, Former finance minister Arun Jaitley, 73, a prominent face of the Union government's functioning these days, is not ruling out the possibility of he and his party Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP) contesting assembly elections in the highly competitive Lok Sabha constituency of Delhi. "We will analyse the situation at the time of the Assembly elections which is yet to be fixed. The party will decide on that," Jaitley said after interacting with BJP workers in Delhi on Saturday. "The BJP is a big umbrella. There are several state units of the BJP and the party needs to be rejuvenated." The Raghav Lakhanpal-led BJP swept the three assembly seats of Delhi -Chandni Chowk, East Delhi and West Delhi - in the elections held last month. With the national elections only five months away, the BJP is facing political and organisational challenges after the setback in the Lok Sabha elections. Since the election of Prime Minister Narendra Modi in May 2014, a year and a half after he took over as the prime minister, the BJP has been repeatedly criticised over issues such as poor governance, attacks on freedom of expression, economy, social issues, etc. The BJP itself has lost many elections too. The party's condition seems to be getting worse in both the Centre and the states. In the last three phases of the Lok Sabha elections, the BJP lost against the Congress-led opposition alliance. The BJP finished third in Madhya Pradesh, second in Rajasthan and third in Chhattisgarh. Delhi election: Congress bags all three seats in Delhi Assembly polls In the assembly election held in Delhi on December 4, the BJP secured 33 seats, 13 short of the magic figure. The Congress won all three seats, putting an end to the BJP's 14-year-long stint in power. The party's performance was the worst in the history of Delhi elections. The Congress swept all the three seats in 1998 but it had secured only two seats in 1993. The BJP's Deen Dayal

Upadhyay had contested from Chandni Chowk in 1992 as a non-BJP candidate, defeating then Congress leader Sajjan Kumar, who later became chief minister of Delhi. The Delhi Assembly has 70 seats - 20 for each of the three regions
